MoneyWr

PRESS RELEASE
Châtillon, 21 October 2026

MoneyWr, the app that keeps you out of your overdraft, arrives on Android

Process software launches MoneyWr, a budget forecasting app for Android. It works out what will be left at the end of each of the next twelve months, helps fund projects without going overdrawn and warns before a direct debit, not after. The Premium trial is free for 30 days.

Most budgeting apps tell the story of last month: what was spent, and in which category. They rarely say whether there will be enough for a holiday in August, a new car or next week's direct debit. Often, people find out when they go overdrawn.

MoneyWr turns the question around: instead of sorting the past, it works out the future, month by month, and warns while there is still time to act.

The next twelve months, worked out in advance

Connected to the bank read-only, through Bridge, a licensed provider, MoneyWr finds the salary, fixed bills and subscriptions, then works out the balance at the end of every month over a rolling year. A tight month shows up weeks ahead.

Projects funded without an overdraft

Holidays, a car, renovations: set an amount and a date, MoneyWr spreads the effort over the months and checks that none drops below zero. Before a purchase, "Can I afford it?" says whether it fits, and what to do otherwise: postpone it or spread it.

Warned before, not after

The day before a direct debit, ahead of a critical month, on any unexpected payment on the account. Artificial intelligence sorts transactions and names merchants; it never receives the user's identity and can be switched off.

> "I created MoneyWr because I wanted to know, before saying yes to a project, whether my month-ends would hold. The apps I tried told me what I had spent; I wanted an app to tell me what I would have left."
